- Background:
The community of Irane, comprised of 337 households and 1,512 inhabitants, is facing severe water, sanitation, and hygiene (WASH) challenges. Currently, there is no clean water infrastructure, either in homes or at the local primary school. Residents rely on open wells, which are often contaminated.

Community members depend on a single well for all personal hygiene needs, without gender segregation

- Details of the project:
 - Drilling and installation of a hand-pump well in a central location accessible to both the community and the primary school, water quality testing, and establishment of a water committee
 - Sanitation & hygiene promotion campaigns for the community, school-based WASH programs, and a door-to-door sensitization campaign
 - Monitoring of regular water quality checks and functionality assessments of the well, and follow-up visits
 - Training local technicians in basic repairs to ensure long-term functionality
